On page 32 Bergoglio writes that the understanding of human weakness "can never mean a compromise and falsification of the criterion of good and evil, with the intention of adapting it to the existential circumstances of human persons and groups."

And this would be a response to doubt number four.

On page 30, finally, he rejects it as a "grave temptation" to maintain that it is impossible for sinful man to observe the holy law of God, and therefore to want to "decide for himself what is good and what is evil" instead of invoking the grace that God always grants.

And this would be a response to the fifth doubt.

There were deeper divisions between the classical liberalism of Thatcher & the British nationalism of Powell.
Mrs Thatcher came only twice, once as prime minister. That was the occasion for a notable non-meeting of minds. Edward Norman (then Dean of Peterhouse) had attempted to mount a Christian argument for nuclear weapons. The discussion moved on to 'Western values'. Mrs Thatcher said (in effect) that Norman had shown that the Bomb was necessary for the defence of our values. Powell: 'No, we do not fight for values. I would fight for this country even if it had a communist government'. Thatcher (it was just before the Argentinian invasion of the Falklands): 'Nonsense, Enoch. If I send British troops abroad, it will be to defend our values.' 'No, Prime Minister, values exist in a transcendental realm, beyond space and time. They can neither be fought for, nor destroyed.' Mrs Thatcher looked utterly baffled. She had just been presented with the difference between Toryism and American Republicanism.

Frederick Douglass continuing to do an amazing job pillqt.it/GO1Aza

These gentlemen have turned their attention to the Celestial Empire. They would rather have laborers who would work for nothing; but as they cannot get the negro on these terms, they want Chinamen, who, they hope, will work for next to nothing. Companies and associations may yet be formed to promote this Mongolian invasion. The loss of the negro is to gain them the Chinese, and if the thing works well, abolition, in their opinion, will have proved itself to be another blessing in disguise.

Frederick Douglass doing an amazing job and is being recognized more and more pillqt.it/WgNZn

The old avocations, by which colored men obtained a livelihood, are rapidly, unceasingly and inevitably passing into other hands; every hour sees the black man elbowed out of employment by some newly arrived emigrant, whose hunger and whose color are thought to give him a better title to the place; and so we believe it will continue to be until the last prop is levelled beneath us... It is evident, painfully evident to every reflecting mind that the means of living, for colored men, are becoming more and more precarious and limited. Employments and callings, formerly monopolized by us, are so no longer.

If you tax that $50 billion at 20 percent of imports – which is by the way a practice that 160 other countries do – right now our country's policy is to tax exports and let imports flow freely in, which is ridiculous. By doing it that we can do $10 billion a year and easily pay for the wall just through that mechanism alone. That's really going to provide the funding."

This quote tends to undermine the interpretation of Silence as a tale of spiritual downfall. books.google.com/books?id=ltirB...

Here it is helpful to quote Endo himself at length:

Silence contains various themes, and it received various interpretations and analyses from the critics. But to me the most meaningful thing in the novel is the change in the hero's image of Christ. The hero, a foreigner, believed in a Jesus of majesty and power, an orderly Jesus who was even governed by order. This was the image conceived by Western artists. The novel's hero brought this image with him to Japan, and from that strong face of Christ he gained courage to evangelize.

After suffering many trials and frustrations, however, he was caught at last and brought before the Fumie (picture of Christ which Christians were ordered to step on). Standing there he saw an image of Christ he had never seen before, an image shaped by Japanese hands. It was not the orderly, European, but the worn out face of a Christ suffering as we suffer."

President-Elect Donald J. Trump Names Carl Icahn Special Advisor to the President on Regulatory Reform

(New York, NY)--- President-elect Donald J. Trump today announced that Carl Icahn has agreed to serve as a special advisor to the President on issues relating to regulatory reform.

Over the course of six decades, Mr. Icahn has distinguished himself as one of America's most successful businessmen and investors. Mr. Icahn was one of President-elect Trump's earliest supporters, and his intimate knowledge of what businesses need to grow and thrive makes him a trusted voice in developing President-elect Trump's America First economic agenda. Icahn will be a leader in helping American entrepreneurs shed job-killing regulations that stifle economic growth.

"Carl was with me from the beginning and with his being one of the world's great businessmen, that was something truly appreciative," said President-elect Trump. "He is not only a brilliant negotiator, but also someone who is literally able to predict the future especially relating to jobs, business, and economics." He helps on the strongest regulations that our country is faced with will be invaluable."

"I am proud to serve President-elect Trump as a special advisor on regulatory reform," said Mr. Icahn. "Under President Obama, America's business owners have been crippled by over $1 billion in new regulations and over 750 billion hours dealing with paperwork. It's time to break free of excessive regulation and let our entrepreneurs do what they do best: create jobs and support communities. President-elect Trump is serious about helping American families, and regulatory reform will be a critical component of making America work again."

I'm the guy pushing a trillion-dollar infrastructure plan. With negative interest rates throughout the world, it's the greatest opportunity to rebuild everything. Ship yards, iron works, get them all jacked up. We're just going to throw it up against the wall and see if it sticks.
